

ABSTRACT

The present invention discloses novel systems and methods for enabling two-way radio communications over a computer network including correlating signals received by a two-way radio networking base/repeater station from a two-way radio to an internet or Internet Protocol address of one or more other base/repeater stations and establishing a computer network link for two-way radio networking communications over a computer network such as the Internet.